In the Joint Committee on Workforce Development, the Union has been working with the University to examine the opportunities for learning and skill development that are available to staff. The Union members serving on this committee include Lynn Wang DeLacey, Randi Ellingboe, Colette Labrador, Shamim Morani, Kasia Razynska, and Leon Welch.

Internal mobility-the possibility of transferring within the University to new positions-is an important aspect of learning and development for Harvard staff. In the past year, the University's Center for Workplace Development has begun creating events to help staff members who are facing the challenges of internal transfer. The Union members of the Joint Committee on Workforce Development encourage you to attend sessions of Career Week 2006, and to give feedback on them, so that we can push for more and better events in the future!

Career Week: Developing Your Career Toolbox
An internal career education event sponsored by Career Connection
October 23-27, 2006

This week of workshops held around the University will provide insight, tools and techniques for navigating a successful career within Harvard. Designed specifically for Harvard employees, Career Week responds to career development interests expressed in the Employee Engagement Survey and at April's popular Career Connect event. For more information, including the schedule of sessions, please see the Career Connect web page:
